

Whether you need one user manual or a complete suite of documentation, C-Net can help. Our services cover a full range of customised documentation.

We take a solutions approach, creating knowledge resources that can include users' guides, reference manuals, help systems, and other supporting materials. In each case, the work we do responds to your particular need and is carried out in partnership with you.

If you have in-house documentation resources, we can become a virtual extension of them, supporting your documentation people when resources become tight or taking on specific assignments to ward off a delay in the project. If you don't have the resources to produce the documentation, we can fill that role, providing you with complete end user documentation based on the user acceptance testing that is conducted on your SafetySuite system prior to go-live.

End-user documentation provides instructions for performing tasks associated with using SafetySuite. Ultimately, end users determine whether the new system succeeds or fails. Good documentation promotes end-user satisfaction, productivity, and efficiency.

We use the expertise of our knowledge of SafetySuite and the business knowledge that we acquired during the implementation to produce easy to follow documentation that is accurate and easy to navigate.
